NORTHWEST HEAT WAVE TAKES SCORE LIVES

Bridge Span Gives Way, 5 Men Reported Killed

ACCIDENT IN HIGHWAY WORK AT CARTHAGE, TENN.

CONCRETE SPAN STOOD 35 FEET
HIGH OVER CANEY FORK
RIVER

STEEL GIRDER HOLDING CON-CRETE FORMS SNAPS, DROP-PING DEAD WEIGHT

Carthage, Tenn., June 19.—(U.P.)—A forty foot span of a highway bridge under construction over Caney Fork river broke loose and fell into the stream today.

Unconfirmed reports were that five men had been killed and an equal number seriously injured.

The concrete span stood 35 feet high over the river.

Workmen said a steel girder which held the concrete forms snapped in two, dropping the dead weight. About 15 men were on the span when it fell according to estimates. Half of them were reported caught in the formless mass of soft cement.

Part of the debris in which workers were pinned lay in shallow water, the rest of it on the bank of the stream.

Ambulances and physicians were dispatched to the scene. Rescue work was slow due to the condition of the wet cement. The injured cried out from where they were caught between girders and twisted planks.

Two bodies were removed a few minutes after the collapse.

The bridge, a 1200-foot structure, was only one-fourth completed, and was being constructed by a Baltimore, Md., firm.

There were about 40 men at work on the project when the collapse occurred. Most of the men lived here. No identification was made immediately of the dead men. Six injured men were accounted for.

More than 100 men, including many farmers and road workers began the work of probing the debris for additional bodies. Construction company foremen began a check later to determine the number of missing men.

The river banks on both sides soon were lined with scores of automobiles as crowds began to gather at the scene of the tragedy. Wives and children of the bridge crew were among those watching the search for additional bodies. Foremen said they believed all the workmen were accounted for, but they continued to tear aside the cement.

RUMOR TORRIO MAY SUCCEED AL CAPONE AS GANG LEADER

Chicago, June 19.—(U.P.)—While federal agents hunted today throughout the city for 66 followers of Scarface Al Capone, reports were broadcast that Johnny Torrio had returned and would take over Capone's gang when Scarface Al leaves for Leavenworth prison.

United States District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson was reported investigating the Torrio stories.

Torrio was considered a "big shot" in the underworld back around 1920, when it is said, he personally brought Capone, then a Brooklyn bouncer, to Chicago.

Several attempts were made on Torrio's life in later years and he finally fled. It was said he went to Italy. Reports now are he went to Florida instead and never was out of touch with the gang which became so powerful under Scarface Al's leadership that it earned upwards of $700,000,000 in ten years.

FATE OF 70 STATE EMPLOYES DEPENDS ON BENSON DECISION

St. Paul, June 19.—(U.P.)—The fate of 70 state employees today depended upon a decision by Attorney General Henry N. Benson on whether the newly created conservation commission must take over employees of the state auditor's trust fund lands division when the lands are transferred to it.

No provision for salaries was made by the legislature when the commission was created and whether a portion of the state auditor's payroll could be transferred with the land and employees also was being decided.

Farmer Killed by Runaway Horses Near Fergus Falls

Fergus Falls, Minn., June 19.—(U.P.)—His neck broken when his son's team of horses ran away and collided with his cultivator, Philip Hess, a farmer near Tintah, was killed late yesterday. He was cultivating corn. Hess was thrown off his machine.

SNOW-WHITE PEAHEN EGGS QUOTED AT $60 PER DOZEN

Dallas, Tex., June 19.—(U.P.)—Eggs were selling at $60 a dozen today at Maralis Park zoo.

The hen that laid them is one of the rarest fowls in existence, a snow-white peahen, who, with her husband, also white, recently joined the exclusive feathered colony at the zoo.

Yesterday she laid her first egg since her arrival from New Hampshire to the great joy of Superintendent L. E. Blondin.

"One setting of five of these," said Superintendent Blondin, "is worth $25. When white peahens get started—which isn't very often—they keep it up for quite a while. I see where this peahen is going to make the zoo a lot of money."

VILLAGE LOCKUP AND CITY JAIL ARE ROUNDLY SCORED

REPRESENT THE WORST DEFECT
IN OUR PRESENT TREAT-MENT OF CRIMINALS

HASTINGS R. HART, NEW YORK,
TELLS NATIONAL CONFER-ENCE OF SOCIAL WORK

Minneapolis, June 19.—(U.P.)—The village lockup and the city jail represent the worst defect in our present treatment of criminals, Hastings R. Hart, New York, told the national Conference of Social Work today.

"In many institutions prisoners are kept with from 10 to 15 other prisoners usually with wooden or steel bunks, sometimes without any bedding whatever," Hart pointed out in an advance of his talk.

"Few lockups have any adequate facilities for classifying women. Old and hardened offenders, prostitutes and women suffering from infectious diseases are often kept in the same room with girls of 16 or 17, arrested for the first time for shop-lifting."

"Our recent study, made for the Wickersham report on law observance and enforcement, shows that out of 5,000 lockups more than 40 per cent were fire traps and numerous prisoners had burned to death."

Since the provisions of the law implies that the accused person is innocent until proven guilty, Hart said that these accused persons, many of whom are innocent, must be decently and humanely kept until their guilt or innocence can be determined.

Prisoners should be classified into four groups as to age, sex, health and dangerous and harmless, Hart said. He recommended that every prisoner be kept in a separate cell and should be kept busy. Responsible state commissions to study jails and police should be provided in every state and patrons, guards and jailors should be chosen with great care.

Social work in the future will be conducted by a public agency or public welfare, he predicted.

"This unpaid board will be free from politics," Conant said. "It will appoint an executive and staff. Many functions will be taken from the courts and it will take over the work of present private agencies."

Poor Weather Conditions Delay Start of Gatty

Roosevelt Field, L. I., June 19.—(U.P.)—Harold Gatty, who is planning a trans-Atlantic flight with Wiley Post, said today that the start will be delayed for a day or two because of poor weather conditions.

The Post-Gatty plane is ready to start at a moment's notice, but, according to Dr. James H. Kimball of the United States weather bureau, flying conditions at present over the ocean are most unfavorable.

Graf Zeppelin Alights Safely on Lake Constance

Friedrichshafen, Germany, June 19.—(U.P.)—Equipped with new watertight gondolas and with lifeboats, the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin alighted safely on water for the first time today when a descent was made on Lake Constance.

The Graf Zeppelin will leave soon on an Arctic flight which may take it over the North Pole.

Bemidji Youth Drowns While Swimming in Lake

Bemidji, Minn., June 19.—(U.P.)—County authorities today searched for the body of Herman Thibert, 22, Bemidji, who was drowned in Grant lake near here. Thibert had gone swimming to escape the heat and it was believed was attacked with cramps.

Farmers, Lumbermen, General Merchants Fight Rail Plea For 15 Pct. Freight Rate Raise

RAILWAYS CLAIM LARGE INCREASE IN TAXATION

MORE THAN THIRD CARRIERS'
NET INCOME GOES TO VARI-OUS TAX DEMANDS

NORTH DAKOTA RAIL COMMIS-SIONERS DENY EMERGENCY
REQUIRING RATE RAISE
By H. O. THOMPSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, June 19.—Agriculturists, lumber interests, and general merchandisers joined today in fighting the railroads' proposed 15 per cent increase in freight rates.

While many large shippers are withholding their protests until the interstate commerce commission sets a date for hearings on the roads' petition proposals are arriving in large numbers.

On the railroads' side, a statement was issued by the American Railway Association, saying that more than a third of the carriers' net income goes to the federal, state and local governments in taxes. In the first four months of this year, the association said, 36.73 cents out of each dollar of net revenue and 7.61 cents out of each dollar of gross receipts, went into taxes.

The railroads' 1930 tax bill was placed by the association at $368,000,000, compared with $31,000,000 in 1890.

Carl Williams, member of the federal farm board, said he believed farmers would look upon the rate increase petition with enthusiastic dislike and that the attitude of agriculture in general was that the roads should reduce their rates rather than raise them.

The Wyoming Stock Growers' Association adopted a resolution asking the interstate commerce commission to deny the carriers' petition.

Other protests: Senator Henrik Shipstead, farmer-laborer, Minnesota: "A general increase in railroad rates at any time is an attack upon the income of commerce and agriculture."

Board of railroad commissioners of North Dakota: "We deny the existence of any emergency requiring general freight rate increases and urge that such a petition be dismissed."

HAITI LEGISLATURE ADOPT PUGNACIOUS FRAME OF MIND

Port au Prince, Haiti, June 19.—(U.P.)—The legislature chamber unanimously adopted a report today declaring the treaty with the United States to have been non-existent since May, 1926.

A message was sent to President Stenio Vincent asking immediate steps be taken through regular channels to put a stop to the "illegal occupation" of the republic by the United States.

SUB NAUTILUS LOSES ITS BRIDGE AND PERISCOPE

Washington, June 19.—(U.P.)—Already battered and partially disabled in mid-Atlantic, the submarine Nautilus in which Explorer Hubert Wilkins proposes to reach the North Pole now has had its bridge and periscope swept away.

The battleship Wyoming reported to the navy department that it was keeping in close touch with the submarine. The navy report said:

"Wyoming reports very rough sea with ship rolling heavily. Nautilus has lost bridge and periscope. Can see nothing. Sealed up inside without running lights. Wyoming keep in searchlight and frequent radio communications. Making course and speed as desired."

The report was timed 9 p. m. last night. At that hour the Nautilus still was about 350 miles from Queenstown, Ireland, her immediate goal.

TENSION GROWS AMONG PRISONERS AT CANON CITY

SPECIAL GUARD DETACHMENT
SEARCHES CELLS FOR RE-PORTED DYNAMITE CACHE

FEAR OF NEW TROUBLE, SCENE
OF ONE BLOODY MUTINY,
IS SENSED

Canon City, Colo., June 19.—(U.P.)—Tension among prisoners was increased at the Colorado state penitentiary today after a special guard detachment had gone carefully through their cells searching for a reported cache of dynamite.

Fear of new trouble at the prison, scene of one bloody mutiny, reached penitentiary officials when one of the institution's "stool pigeons" declared there was enough dynamite in the penitentiary to wreck it.

The tip climaxed 10 days of trouble and tumult at the prison, during which numerous prisoners had escaped and one, Chester Storm, had threatened to start a riot if he were not given his freedom.

Deputy Warden Roy Best, acting for Warden F. E. Crawford who is absent on a vacation, on receipt of the information immediately mobilized a special guard detachment and took charge personally of a search of the buildings and grounds.

For nine hours they searched the penitentiary. They failed to discover any explosive, but found a knife secreted in cell house No. 3.

While report of dynamite hidden in the prison here generally was doubted, prison officials nevertheless increased guard vigilance and inside information sources were checked carefully in the hope word of a possible riot would come over the "grapevine line."

ATTACH DEEP SIGNIFICANCE TO MELLON IN LONDON

DAILY EXPRESS SAYS GOVERN-MENT INVITED HIM TO LONDON

TO DISCUSS REVISION OF WAR
DEBTS AND OTHER MATTERS

By HENRY T. RUSSELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, June 19.—The presence of Andrew Mellon, United States secretary of the treasury, in London was seen today as having deeper official significance than Mellon has admitted.

The Daily Express said the government had invited Mellon to London to discuss revision of war debts. It was said that a representative of the bank participated in conversations between Mellon and Montague Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

Mellon was reported by The Daily Express to have said he was willing to discuss revision only on condition Great Britain immediately began reduction of armaments and "joins an international boycott of Soviet Russia."

Denial, however, was promptly issued in a statement from No. 10 Downing Street, the official residence of the premier. The statement said that newspaper reports the government had invited Mellon to come to England to discuss revision of war debts was "in every respect absolutely untrue."

It added that no communication was made to government at Washington, "inviting them to discuss this or any other subject."

Debt revision and arms reduction have been closely linked recently, with many statesmen seemingly convinced that only an agreement assuring success of the disarmament conference at Geneva next year would open the way for debt readjustment. The subject, it is recognized, is a delicate one at present, in view of the 1922 presidential elections.

It was understood, however, that Mellon's conference with government officials, at least, were terminated for the time being. He has conferred twice with Premier J. Ramsay MacDonald and with Norman twice, talking with the banker nearly two hours yesterday.

Mellon may see Sir Josiah Stamp and other leading bankers on the question of gold distribution as well as war debts, it was indicated, continuing conversations started by Owen D. Young on his visit to confer with financial leaders in Europe.

While here, Mellon also was expected to meet French and German diplomatic representatives before proceeding to the continent. Mellon has insisted that he is in Europe "not on serious business."

His conferences here coincided with the announcement that Premier MacDonald and Arthur Henderson, foreign secretary, plan to proceed to Berlin on July 17, to discuss proposals for revision of war debts, particularly by Chancellor Heinrich Brüning.

Black Natives of Bantango Send $3.77 for Starving Americans

New York, June 19.—(U.P.)—The board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian church was the recipient today of a collection from the black natives of Bantango, West Africa, "to help starving Americans."

"A month ago there was a little article in the Bantu news sheet," a Presbyterian missionary wrote, "telling of the hard times in America. The item caught the attention of Pastor Eduma Musambi and his son, and they decided to give something for the starving people in America. They quietly told the church people about it and a sum of money was gathered."

The check was for $3.77.

ATTORNEYS TRY TO SHOW SHE ACTED IN GOOD FAITH

MRS. JULIA GARVEY, PROMOTER,
ON TRIAL IN ST. CLOUD
TODAY

HEADED COMPANY TO MANU-
FACTURE CHEAP GASOLINE
SUBSTITUTE

St. Cloud, Minn., June 19.—(U.P.)—Mrs. Julia Garvey, St. Paul, today resumed testimony in her own defense in her trial on charges of grand larceny in connection with her promotion of a company to manufacture a cheap gasoline substitute.

Mrs. Garvey's attorneys attempted to show that she acted in good faith when she solicited funds for her experiments to produce an automobile fuel to cost less than four cents a gallon.

Specific charges against the woman inventor included obtaining money of P. J. Schmitz, Bismarck, N. D., as well as deeds for five farms. County Attorney James J. Quigley said Mrs. Garvey had taken more than $400,000 from numerous small investors in the three years she operated here.

The experiment according to Mrs. Garvey would produce a fuel made up of 75 per cent water and other secret chemicals and could be sold at from two to four cents a gallon.

Quigley said the case may not go to the jury for another week. Witnesses for the defense included George B. Edgerton, St. Paul, who told of similar experiments being conducted successfully in Missouri.

Sister Azaria of St. Margaret's Academy, Minneapolis, testified that she served as Mrs. Garvey's chemist during the years 1926 and 1927. Mrs. Garvey told her that the formula was lost and the two sought to rediscover it. Sister Azaria testified that several samples were produced but they were deemed too dangerous to try out after one sample had ruined an engine, the witness said. The state may call several more witnesses in its rebuttal, Quigley said.

Judge Don M. Cameron of Little Falls is presiding in the case.

PRICES IN NARROW RANGE AT NEW YORK

MAJORITY OF STOCKS SLIGHTLY LOWER, TRADING CON-TINUES DULL

By ELMER C. WALZER
(United Press Financial Editor)

New York, June 19.—The stock market opened today with prices moving in a narrow range, the majority slightly lower. Trading continued dull.

Leading issues appeared to meet better support than yesterday. Steel common opened at 87 1/4 unchanged on a block of 3,000 shares; American Can 99 5/8 up 1/8; Auburn Auto 154 1/4, ex-dividend, up 5/8; Westinghouse Electric 55 3/4 up 1/4; General Motors 33 3/4 up 1/8 and Texas Corporation 20 1/4 up 1/4.

Small declines were noted in International Telephone, Pennsylvania railroad, Loew's, Radio-Keith, American Smelting, International Nickel and Trans-America.

Willmar Man is Drowned Working in Sewer Manhole

Willmar, Minn., June 19.—(U.P.)—Joseph Newberger, 60, city street department employee who was drowned while working in a sewer manhole, will be buried tomorrow.

Newberger struck his head on an obstruction while working in the sewer and drowned in about three feet of water before fellow workmen could come to his aid.

Surviving are his widow and a married daughter.

TEMPERATURES RUN UP TO 109 DEGREES

HEAT PROSTRATIONS, DROWN-
INGS, ACCIDENTS ARE NUMEROUS

SHOWERS AND COOLER WEATH-ER FORECAST FOR TONIGHT

St. Paul, Minn., June 19.—(U.P.)—More than a score of lives have been taken in the northwest by a heat wave that has sent temperatures as high as 109, a United Press survey revealed today.

Showers and cooler weather were forecast for tonight by the weather bureau. Virden, Manitoba, reported the high temperature.

Three persons were reported to have died directly from the heat. At least twelve persons drowned in Minnesota while seeking relief from the sizzling temperatures. Three were drowned in northern Wisconsin and five were killed during floods at Wyane, Alberta.

The heat deaths were:
Elihu Rehling, 65, Pine Island, Minn.
Irwin J. Rue, 33, Bismarck, N. D.
A. T. Latta, 64, Worthington, Minn.

Eight heat prostrations, including that of Patrolman Frank Berry and St. Paul Shahan, assistant Hennepin county attorney, were reported. Berry was directing traffic when he collapsed. The attorney was arguing in Judge Mathias Baldwin's court when he was overcome.

Miss Sandra Kente, a nurse employed at the Franklin M. Crosby home at Lake Minnetonka, was yesterday's drowning victim. Donald J. Davis, treasurer of the General Mills, Minneapolis, dove into the water while fully dressed in a vain attempt to rescue the nurse.

Both Minneapolis and St. Paul had new high temperatures for the year of 94 degrees.

Temperatures of 90 or higher were general. Farmers said that unless there was immediate relief, crops would suffer seriously. Most sections have had sufficient rain, but it was feared crops could not stand sudden changes like that at Canton, Ill., where the mercury jumped 30 degrees in nine hours.

In the Dakotas, Minnesota, and around Chicago, dry parching winds accompanied the heat wave. The weather bureau considered it possible a wind shift might bring lake shore cities relief off the lake.

Phoenix was the hottest place in the country yesterday with a maximum of 104 degrees. Amarillo was next with 100. Some other places with maximums of over 90 were: Cairo, Ill., 92; Springfield, Ill., 96; Davenport, Ia., 92; St. Louis, 94; Sioux City, 94; Minneapolis, 94; El Paso, 96; Pueblo, 96; Memphis, 94; Kansas City, 92; Little Rock, 92.

Chicago, June 19.—With summer still officially two days away, the country was gripped today by a sizzling heat wave.

Temperatures above 90 prevailed yesterday throughout most of the western half of the United States and at last two places, Phoenix and Amarillo, the mercury climbed to the 100 mark or higher.

In Chicago, a maximum temperature of 90 degrees was reached at 5 P. M. It was the hottest it had been this year and only one degree lower than the all-time record for June 18.

At least two deaths were attributed indirectly to the heat. By coincidence both victims were painters. One, L. Shapiro, fell from a ladder at Benton Harbor, Mich., and was killed, and the other, Henry Brandt, 63, fell dead while painting a house in Oak Park, Ill. Physicians said Shapiro fell when overcome by heat and that Brandt's death was due to heart disease, aggravated by the sudden temperature change.

Edmonton, Alta., June 19.—Cloud-bursts and storms over central Alberta had taken six lives today and flooded streams in the Wayne and Drumheller areas threatened to carry away more than 100 miners' homes.

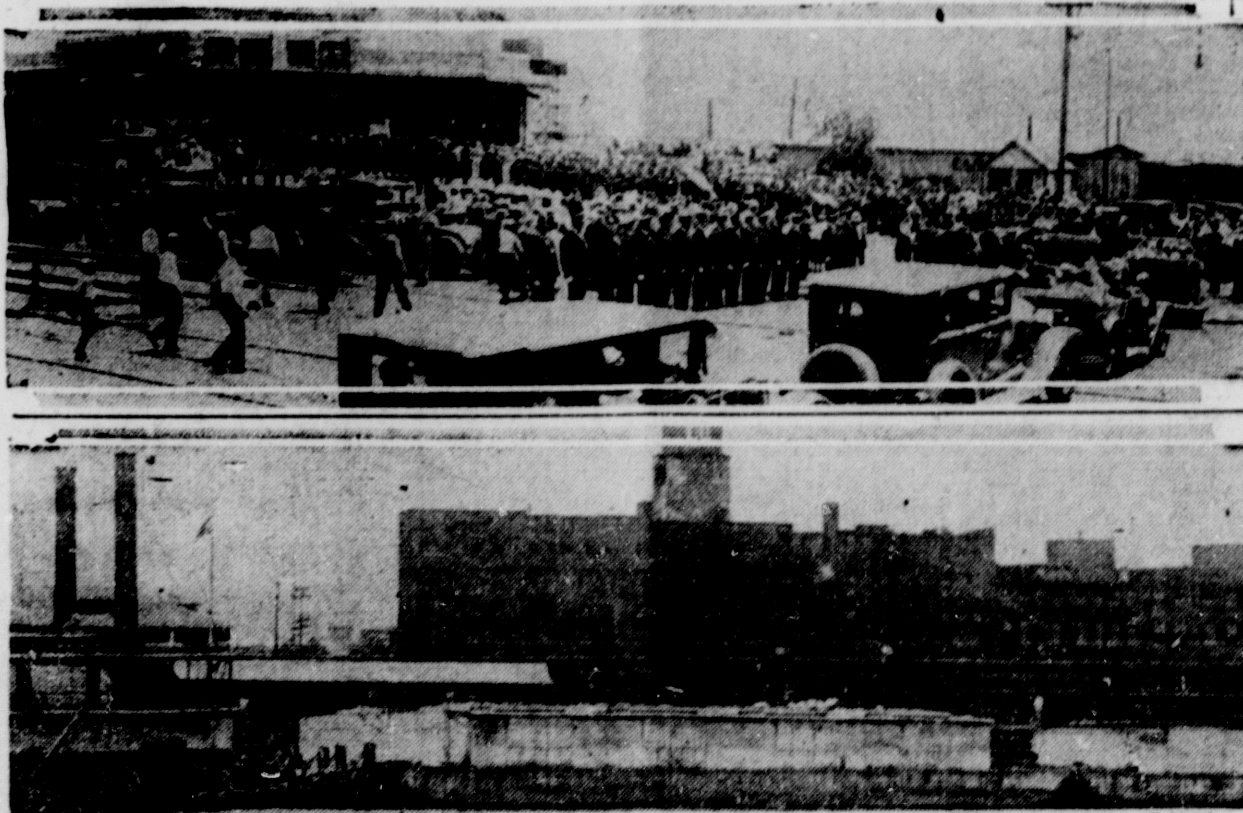

Residents of Wayne isolated by the swollen waters of the Rosebud and Michichi creeks fought against the undermining of their homes as the water flooded basements and first floors of dwellings. Only telephonic communications remained today in Wayne where a cloudburst earlier in the week resulted in the death of four persons.

The storms caused the washout of the Canadian National railway tracks near Ardenode and a freight train was wrecked when it left the tracks. Mike Kleboff, 23, Kamsack, Sask., was killed in the wreck and Charles Katon, 38, Calgary, seriously injured.

Searchers for the bodies of Mrs. James Graham and her son Joseph, 12, victim of Tuesday's storm, who discovered the body of Councillor George Nelson Coates yesterday, found an overturned automobile in which it was said two tourists had been washed to their death.

Temperatures were dropping today and were expected to near the freezing point by tonight.

LAKES-TO-GULF DREAM NEAR REALIZATION

OF ONE BLOODY MUTINY,
IS SENSED

Canon City, Colo., June 19.—(U.P.)—Tension among prisoners was increased at the Colorado state penitentiary today after a special guard detachment had gone carefully through their cells searching for a reported cache of dynamite.

Fear of new trouble at the prison, scene of one bloody mutiny, reached penitentiary officials when one of the institution's "stool pigeons" declared there was enough dynamite in the penitentiary to wreck it.

The tip climaxed 10 days of trouble and tumult at the prison, during which numerous prisoners had escaped and one, Chester Storm, had threatened to start a riot if he were not given his freedom.

Deputy Warden Roy Best, acting for Warden F. E. Crawford who is absent on a vacation, on receipt of the information immediately mobilized a special guard detachment and took charge personally of a search of the buildings and grounds.

For nine hours they searched the penitentiary. They failed to discover any explosive, but found a knife secreted in cell house No. 3.

While report of dynamite hidden in the prison here generally was doubted, prison officials nevertheless increased guard vigilance and inside information sources were checked carefully in the hope word of a possible riot would come over the "grapevine line."

ATTACH DEEP SIGNIFICANCE TO MELLON IN LONDON

DAILY EXPRESS SAYS GOVERN-MENT INVITED HIM TO LONDON

TO DISCUSS REVISION OF WAR
DEBTS AND OTHER
MATTERS

By HENRY T. RUSSELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, June 19.—The presence of Andrew Mellon, United States secretary of the treasury, in London was seen today as having deeper official significance than Mellon has admitted.

The Daily Express said the government had invited Mellon to London to discuss revision of war debts. It was said that a representative of the bank participated in conversations between Mellon and Montague Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

Mellon was reported by The Daily Express to have said he was willing to discuss revision only on condition Great Britain immediately began reduction of armaments and "joins an international boycott of Soviet Russia."

Denial, however, was promptly issued in a statement from No. 10 Downing Street, the official residence of the premier. The statement said that newspaper reports the government had invited Mellon to come to England to discuss revision of war debts was "in every respect absolutely untrue."

It added that no communication was made to government at Washington, "inviting them to discuss this or any other subject."

Debt revision and arms reduction have been closely linked recently, with many statesmen seemingly convinced that only an agreement assuring success of the disarmament conference at Geneva next year would open the way for debt readjustment. The subject, it is recognized, is a delicate one at present, in view of the 1932 presidential elections.

It was understood, however, that Mellon's conference with government officials, at least, were terminated for the time being. He has conferred twice with Premier J. Ramsay MacDonald and with Norman twice, talking with the banker nearly two hours yesterday.

Mellon may see Sir Josiah Stamp and other leading bankers on the question of gold distribution as well as war debts, it was indicated, continuing conversations started by Owen D. Young on his visit to confer with financial leaders in Europe.

While here, Mellon also was expected to meet French and German diplomatic representatives before proceeding to the continent. Mellon has insisted that he is in Europe "not on serious business."

His conferences here coincided with the announcement that Premier MacDonald and Arthur Henderson, foreign secretary, plan to proceed to Berlin on July 17, to discuss proposals for revision of war debts, particularly by Chancellor Heinrich Brüning.

Black Natives of Bantango Send $3.77 for Starving Americans

New York, June 19.—(U.P.)—The board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian church was the recipient today of a collection from the black natives of Bantango, West Africa, "to help starving Americans."

"A month ago there was a little article in the Bulu news sheet," a Presbyterian missionary wrote, telling of the hard times in America. The item caught the attention of Pastor Eduma Musambi and his son, and they decided to give something for the starving people in America. They quietly told the church people about it and a sum of money was gathered.

The check was for $3.77.

ATTORNEYS TRY TO SHOW SHE ACTED IN GOOD FAITH

MRS. JULIA GARVEY, PROMOTER,
ON TRIAL IN ST. CLOUD
TODAY

HEADED COMPANY TO MANU-
FACTURE CHEAP GASOLINE
SUBSTITUTE

St. Cloud, Minn., June 19.—(U.P.)—Mrs. Julia Garvey, St. Paul, today resumed testimony in her own defense in her trial on charges of grand larceny in connection with her promotion of a company to manufacture a cheap gasoline substitute.

Mrs. Garvey's attorneys attempted to show that she acted in good faith when she solicited funds for her experiments to produce an automobile fuel to cost less than four cents a gallon.

Specific charges against the woman inventor included obtaining money of P. J. Schmitz, Bismarck, N. D., as well as deeds for five farms. County Attorney James J. Quigley said Mrs. Garvey had taken more than $400,000 from numerous small investors in the three years she operated here.

The experiment according to Mrs. Garvey would produce a fuel made up of 75 per cent water and other secret chemicals and could be sold at from two to four cents a gallon.

Quigley said the case may not go to the jury for another week. Witnesses for the defense included George E. Edgerton, St. Paul, who told of similar experiments being conducted successfully in Missouri.

Sister Azaria of St. Margaret's Academy, Minneapolis, testified that she served as Mrs. Garvey's chemist during the years 1926 and 1927. Mrs. Garvey told her that the formula was lost and the two sought to rediscover it, Sister Azaria testified.

Several samples were produced but they were deemed too dangerous to try out after one sample had ruined an engine, the witness said. The state may call several more witnesses in its rebuttal, Quigley said.

Judge Don M. Cameron of Little Falls is presiding in the case.

By ELMER C. WALZER
(United Press Financial Editor)

New York, June 19.—The stock market opened today with prices moving in a narrow range, the majority slightly lower. Trading continued dull. Leading issues appeared to meet better support than yesterday. Steel common opened at 87 1/4 unchanged on a block of 3,000 shares; American Can 99 5/8 up 1/8; Auburn Auto 154 1/2, ex-dividend, up 5/8; Westinghouse Electric 55 3/4 up 1/4; General Motors 33 3/4 up 1/8 and Texas Corporation 20 1/4 up 1/4.

Small declines were noted in International Telephone, Pennsylvania railroad, Loew's, Radio-Keith, American Smelting, International Nickel and Trans-America.

Willmar Man is Drowned Working in Sewer Manhole

Willmar, Minn., June 19.—(U.P.)—Joseph Newberger, 60, city street department employee who was drowned while working in a sewer manhole, will be buried tomorrow.

Surviving are his widow and a married daughter.

TEMPERATURES RUN UP TO 109 DEGREES

HEAT PROSTRATIONS, DROWN-
INGS, ACCIDENTS ARE NUMEROUS

SHOWERS AND COOLER WEATH-ER FORECAST FOR
TONIGHT

St. Paul, Minn., June 19.—(U.P.)—More than a score of lives have been taken in the northwest by a heat wave that has sent temperatures as high as 109, a United Press survey revealed today.

Showers and cooler weather were forecast for tonight by the weather bureau. Virden, Manitoba, reported the high temperature.

Three persons were reported to have died directly from the heat. At least twelve persons drowned in Minnesota while seeking relief from the sizzling temperatures. Three were drowned in northern Wisconsin and five were killed during floods at Wyand, Alberta.

The heat deaths were:

Elihu Rehling, 65, Pine Island, Minn.
Irwin J. Rue, 33, Bismarck, N. D.
A. T. Latta, 64, Worthington, Minn.

Eight heat prostrations, including that of Patrolman Frank Berry and S. Paul Shahan, assistant Hennepin county attorney, were reported. Berry was directing traffic when he collapsed. The attorney was arguing in Judge Mathias Baldwin's court when he was overcome.

Miss Sandrena Kentie, a nurse employed at the Franklin M. Crosby home at Lake Minnetonka, was yesterday's drowning victim. Donald J. Davis, treasurer of the General Mills, Minneapolis, dove into the water while fully dressed in a vain attempt to rescue the nurse.

Both Minneapolis and St. Paul had new high temperatures for the year of 94 degrees.

Temperatures of 90 or higher were general. Farmers said that unless there was immediate relief, crops would suffer seriously. Most sections have had sufficient rain, but it was feared crops could not stand sudden changes like that at Canton, Ill., where the mercury jumped 30 degrees in nine hours.

In the Dakotas, Minnesota, and around Chicago, dry parching winds accompanied the heat wave. The weather bureau considered it possible a wind shift might bring lake shore cities relief off the lake.

Phoenix was the hottest place in the country yesterday with a maximum of 104 degrees. Amarillo was next with 100. Some other places with maximums of over 90 were: Cairo, Ill., 92; Springfield, Ill., 96; Davenport, Ia., 92; St. Louis, 94; Sioux City, 94; Minneapolis, 94; El Paso, 96; Pueblo, 96; Memphis, 94; Kansas City, 92; Little Rock, 92.

Chicago, June 19.—With summer still officially two days away, the country was gripped today by a sizzling heat wave.

Temperatures above 90 prevailed yesterday throughout most of the western half of the United States and at last two places, Phoenix and Amarillo, the mercury climbed to the 100 mark or higher.

In Chicago, a maximum temperature of 90 degrees was reached at 5 P. M. It was the hottest it had been this year and only one degree lower than the all-time record for June 18.

At least two deaths were attributed indirectly to the heat. By coincidence both victims were painters. One, L. Shapiro, fell from a ladder at Benton Harbor, Mich., and was killed, and the other, Henry Brandt, 63, fell dead while painting a house in Oak Park, Ill. Physicians said Shapiro fell when overcome by heat and that Brandt's death was due to heart disease, aggravated by the sudden temperature change.

Edmonton, Alta., June 19.—Cloud-bursts and storms over central Alberta had taken six lives today and flooded streams in the Wayne and Drumheller areas threatened to carry away more than 100 miners' homes.

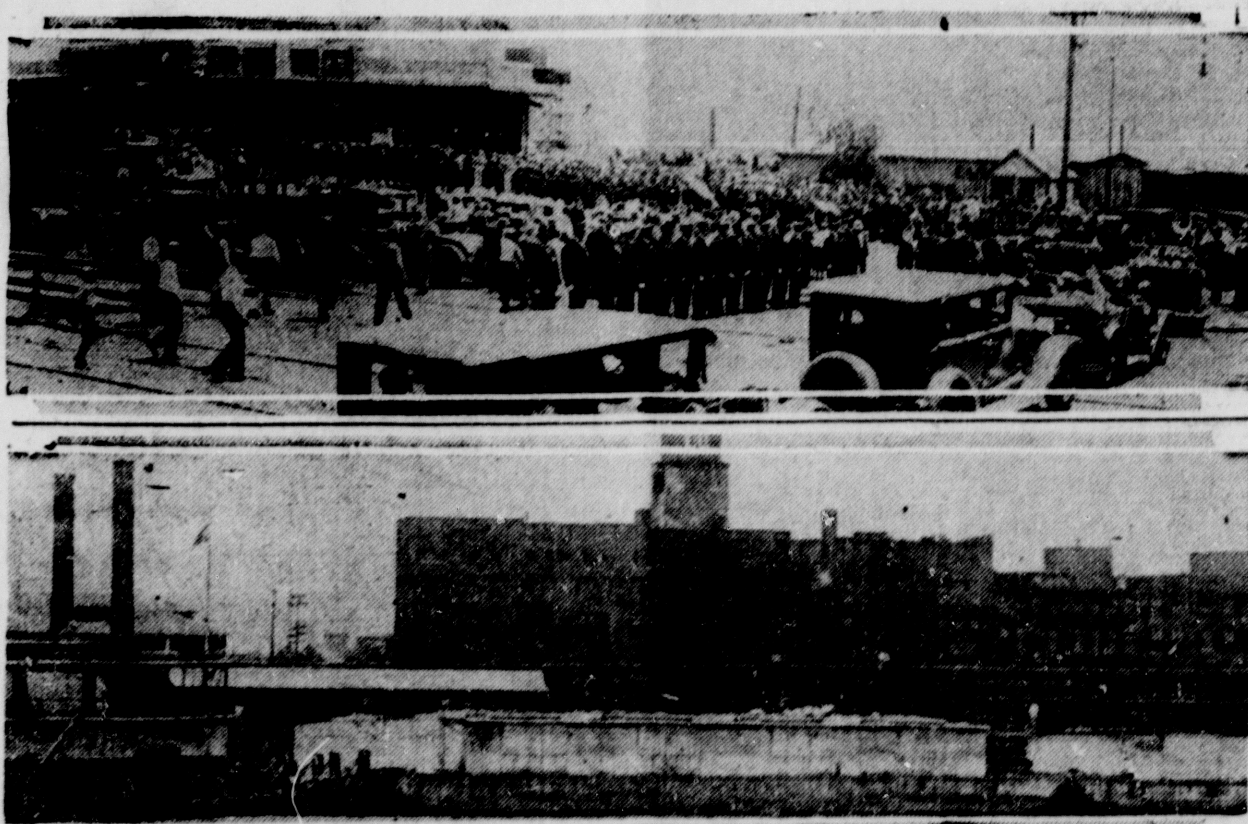

Residents of Wayne isolated by the swollen waters of the Rosebud and Michichi creeks fought against the undermining of their homes as the water flooded basements and first floors of dwellings. Only telephone communications remained today in Wayne where a cloudburst earlier in the week resulted in the death of four persons.

The storms caused the washout of the Canadian National railway tracks near Ardenode and a freight train was wrecked when it left the tracks. Mike Kleboff, 23, Kamsack, Sask., was killed in the wreck and Charles Katon, 38, Calgary, seriously injured.

Searchers for the bodies of Mrs. James Graham and her son Joseph, 12, victim of Tuesday's storm, who discovered the body of Councillor George Nelson Coates yesterday, found an overturned automobile in which it was said two tourists had been washed to their death.

Temperatures were dropping today and were expected to near the freezing point by tonight.

LAKES-TO-GULF DREAM NEAR REALIZATION

BRAINERD'S ODDEST STORY OF TODAY

A good old fashioned garden onion bedecked with a gold wedding ring.

This unusual phenomenon was discovered by Robert Jaeger, custodian of Evergreen cemetery
as he plucked onions for his supper from his garden at his home
837 Bluff avenue late Wednesday afternoon. The ring encircled the stem of the onion.

"It shone right in my face. I wondered at this strange happening," Mr. Jaeger recalled today.

The onion was the third picked by Mr. Jaeger from the third row in the garden of 1,000 onions that Mrs. Jaeger planted in April.

Inside the ring are the letters
R. F. and the number 91 which is believed to be the year 1891.
The ring is in fine condition.
The owner may claim it by calling at the home of Mr. Jaeger.
Had the ring not been located at this time it is liked that it would have been imbedded in the onion when it reached maturity.

Another unusual part of the discovery was this. The one was the third onion in the third row and stamped in the ring in small numbers brought out by a magnifying glass are the numbers 333.

Revealing Words

CLIFFORD DAK, writing in London Fortnightly Review, says that in common with all but the hardest-headed persons, he has often wished he could know how life tasted to the people of bygone days.

Fortunately, their buildings, their books and the chance relics which we find in museums do make it possible to imagine a great part of their life. After some time, indeed, a couple of words, if carefully savored, can give us the feeling of a whole period; for the past, as we know from personal experience, is most vividly evoked by trifles.

If, for example, we meditate upon mahogany and missionaries, we are borne back, as though in a barouche, to the heyday of Queen Victoria's reign. Snuff-boxes and prize-fights, considered together, will bring us a whiff of the Regency.

When we learn that Dr. Johnson stirred his tea with the forefinger, we look through a peep-hole at a large area of the eighteenth century. The knowledge that people in the boxes of a theater amused themselves by spitting upon the people below them, transports us in the twinkling of an eye to the days of Charles the Second.

If we associate the words "bear-baiting" and "madrigals," we return to Elizabethan London, and to amplify our sense of that age, we have only to remember that Shakespeare never handled a fork. With what formula will our great-grandchildren call up a ghost of the nineteen-twenties?

Nautilus Voyage

In advance stories on the submarine Nautilus, all writers dwelt on the danger attending the voyage under Arctic ice. None sensed any danger in crossing the Atlantic.

In early tests the submarine lost a man overboard while still in American home waters. The trip across the Atlantic to London has been fraught with real danger. In storms encountered the Nautilus lost her tow line. The convoy first given the submarine left her when several hundred miles out at sea, and then the trouble started.

The Wyoming now stands by to give aid when needed. Today the Nautilus is "plugging" along at a speed of about seven knots an hour. Stormy seas are sweeping the deck. With no periscope and bridge it is now running blind with no signals. This is harder navigation than running a logging train on "smoke signals."

With such a run of luck in an open sea where aid may be gained any time anything goes wrong we wonder what the Nautilus will do when she encounters the unknown dangers, obstacles and predicaments of voyaging under the ice. It begins to look as though the whole project is almost foolhardy in its design and conception and ultimate aims. Probably after this Atlantic experience commander and crew may change their plans.

Hot Weather Accidents

THE Brainerd Chapter of the Red Cross has again engaged a swimming instructor and safety director who will give instruction and advice at the various beaches in the lake country.

Hot weather seems to bring a train of accidents in the water. People become over-heated and plunge in. Their bodies cannot stand the sudden reaction and they are weakened or attacked by cramps and go down and to their grave if no help is near.

It requires expert aid to rescue a swimmer. The drowning individual, frantic and half dying, gets a strangle hold on anybody or anything and if the rescuer is no expert handling such cases, he may go down too.

Water Safety Director Earl Berg teaches swimming and life saving. His work has been so satisfactory that he has now been employed several seasons by the Brainerd Red Cross chapter.

Guard Band Music

THE 125th Field Artillery band played at Little Falls Tuesday evening and drew a large attendance. The 151st Field Artillery band will play at Memorial park on Friday night.

St. Cloud gets one of the bands for a Legion district convention. With these bands of Camp Ripley playing and causing so much real enjoyment for citizens, Brainerd people wonder when we shall be given the pleasure of hearing them.

A Chamber of Commerce committee approached Brigadier General Walsh on the subject before Camp Ripley opened and were informed the bands would also visit Brainerd and play two concerts according to an itinerary arranged. The bands coming to Brainerd would draw a large attendance from the lake country and thus secure an audience from many states.

Merchants to Yield Parking

FIRST steps to "clear the way" for farmers, tourists and visitors who wish to park their cars on the business streets of Little Falls were taken Wednesday with the promise of business men and employees to park on side streets, alleys or rear lots. A similar campaign was successful last year, says the Transcript.

The parking restriction is to be in effect for June, July and August. Similar steps may well be taken in Brainerd. Here the parking becomes such a difficult problem in the business section that it bothers visitors at times. An out of town buyer always wants his car parked near where he does business. It is inconvenient to carry groceries, dry goods, hardware, etc., some distance from store to car.

Father's Day June 21

FATHER'S DAY is Sunday, June 21. Many fathers, in fact, are surprised to know that a day has been set apart for them. They are ready to accept what the day may bring forth and it is hoped Mother and the rest of the family will do kindly deeds for Dad.

All the other holidays in the calendar are "touching" ones for Dad. If the whole family unites to make the coming Sunday a comfortable one for Father, with a number of appropriate presents, and lets him have full sway in the arrangements for the day, it will be satisfactory all around and especially for the chief actor of the day.

Father generally is an uncomplaining sort of an individual. Every home has to have one.

Dave Ordway, wealthy, young aviator, makes a forced landing in an orange grove in the neighborhood of Florida. Looking for the owner to pay him for the damage, Dave comes upon two beautiful girls in overalls. Joan Mulberry, with the aid of her cousin Sally, has been running the business since her father's death, being the widow of Mr. Mulberry, owner of the adjoining grove, when he learns of the damage to his trees, the girls urge Dave to leave. He insists upon reimbursing Mueller, and when he learns Mueller has been molesting the girls, he is now anxious than ever to meet him. Just then Mueller's plane flies by. Dave wonders why he has an amphibian when there is no water in the vicinity. On the way to Mueller's, Dave pictures his former fiancée, haughty Barbara Holworthy, in Joan's place. When Dave objects to Mueller's demand for $2,000, Mueller takes $850 from Dave's wallet at the point of a gun, ordering a check for the balance. This Dave refuses and Mueller, threatening to collect, orders him out of the vicinity before nightfall. Knowing the girls' financial status, Dave is touched by their hospitality. He learns Joan is planning to sell the property and return north, though reluctant to leave the country. Sally, on the other hand, is anxious to get back to bright lights, crowds and music.

CHAPTER VI.

DAVE guessed that there was a long-standing difference of opinion between these girls. He had felt it ever since Sally had whispered an apology for Joan's apparent eurtness. He had the feeling that it would not take a great deal to precipitate a break between them. But even as he studied their faces in an attempt to read what was in their minds, Hannah bustled into the room, almost incoherent in her excitement.

"Miss Joan," she panted, her eyes rolling whitely, "dey's somethin' out yonder do look like a powerful big fire. Do look like Miss Mulberry's house."

With one bound Dave was out of his chair and standing at the back window. The tops of the citrus trees were etched in a red and black half-tone against a background of leaping scarlet flames in the distance.

"That's just what it is—Mueller's house!" gasped Sally, her shoulder pressed against the flyer's arm as she, too, crowded to the window.

The flames mounted higher and higher amid a cloud of vision of fire-shot smoke which glowed dull red as it rolled off into the glowing sky. The very clouds themselves seemed to be ablaze as if the flames were feeding upon themselves. A rumbling noise like distant heat thunder echoed through the tropic night. No wood-fled fire ever burned so fiercely.

More Than Money

"It's my plane!" exclaimed Dave, turning abruptly away from the window.

He raced down the long hall, leaped from the sagging porch and ran through the grove, the girls following at their topmost speed.

What had once been a sleek little monoplane was now a giant skeleton of rapidly disintegrating struts and longerons, surrounded and encompassed by a veritable volcano of belching flames. Just as Dave came to an abrupt halt against the invisible barrier of searing heat, the radial motor dropped from its charred foundations and fell to the sandy soil, growing cherry red. He shielded his face with his arms, looking helplessly at the roaring fire. In a wild circle around the blaze the great trees trembled restlessly in the rising air, their leaves shriveling and turning brown as the hot blast withered the sap within their tender surfaces.

A dull ache throbbed in Dave's heart. The monetary loss was little, but the plane was as dear to him as a full-blooded horse to its master. It was more than an inanimate mechanism of wood, wire and metal. It had been a thing throbbing with life, hurtling breathlessly through the air as though it had been answering the pilot's very wishes instead of his hands on the stick and his feet on the rudder pedals.

Spatters of blazing gasoline were spewed out of the cauldron and set fire to patches of dead grass between the trees. Dozens of tiny fires burned fiercely for a moment and then smoldered to nothing. He watched them, dazedly, glad to take his eyes away from the funeral pyre of his Wasp.

Then, suddenly, he stiffened to attention, gazing intently at a tiny square object which was clearly outlined in the ruddy glare. He stepped forward, scooped it up and returned to the spot where the girls stood watching him.

"Know anyone who uses matches like these?" he asked, holding out a penny box of safeties.

"Almost everybody does," replied Joan. "You buy them in large packages at the cross-roads store."

Foul Play

Dave opened the box and scratched one of the matches against the abrasive. The little stick flared up in a bright yellow flame. He flicked it toward the burning plane.

"Is there much dew here at night?" he asked, a deep crease of thoughtfulness between his eyebrows.

"Yes. At this time of year," replied Joan, puzzled by his question, "the grass is quite wet in the morning."

"Could you have brought this box out here today?"

"No." Joan's voice was positive. "We only carry matches when we're burning scrub."

He slipped the box into his pocket and turned to watch the last remnants of his plane burn into charred sticks and glowing metal. The cousins, understanding his sense of personal loss, were silent in sympathy. There was little fuel to feed the flames, now. In a few moments there would be nothing but smoldering debris.

"Let's go," Dave said quietly. But the girls did not move. They were staring fixedly into the darkness on the other side of the fire. Dave, curious, followed the line of their startled gaze. At first he could see nothing but the crimsoned fir trees. Then, slowly emerging from the wavering shadows, came the figure of a man. A familiar, heavy-set figure, carrying a gun in the crook of his left arm. It was Mueller. Dave felt a pounding in his temples, a tightening in his throat.

By a conscious effort of will, he controlled his almost overpowering desire for battle and stood passive while Mueller stepped full into the flaming circle and stared curiously at the remnants of the plane. The man's ratty eyes traveled over the fast-disappearing wreckage, then squinted through the glare to the other side, where the two girls and the pilot stood watching him. Slowly, deliberately, he spat toward the fire and strolled around to where the silent three were standing.

"Plane burned, eh?" he said, his face expressionless.

"Looks like it, doesn't it?" agreed Dave, fumbling in his pocket.

"A lot more of your trees gone, now," Mueller observed, staring at the girls. "They'll never live after being singed like that."

"It doesn't matter," said Joan, flatly.

Dave placed a cigarette between his lips and turned to Mueller.

"Have you a match?" he asked. Mueller glanced suspiciously at him and hesitated briefly. Then, seeing the girl's eyes upon him, he reached into his side pocket. He shook his head.

"Left 'em at home, I guess."

Dave presented the box he had found in the grass.

"These yours?" he asked, quietly.

Mueller's shifty brown eyes clashed with his. A large, hairy hand accepted the box, opened it and offered it to the flyer.

"Yeah, guess they're mine, all right. Want one?"

Dave's hand shot forward, grasped the barrel of the shotgun and jerked it out of Mueller's arm.

He stepped back and, holding the weapon by the muzzle, whirled it around his head and hurled it far into the outer darkness of the grove. Then he faced the other, his mouth twitching slightly at the left corner.

"So you weren't content with your check-up, and had to burn my plane, eh?"

Mueller's eyes were narrowed into eagle-hard slits. He stood his ground.

"Didn't I tell you you'd save money writing me a check?" he retorted mockingly.

"Fair enough," snapped Dave. "That bus was worth $15,000. I'm going to take that amount out of your hide, right here and now."

Joan and Sally, shocked into inactivity by the sudden flare-up of hostility, saw Dave's hand flash up as swiftly as the stroke of a rattlesnake and heard a dull chopping sound as his knuckles landed full on the point of Mueller's blue-black jaw. The man toppled as if he had been struck by lightning. He lay there, flat on his back, his hands fluttering oddly against the ground. Then, slowly, he raised his head to look up at the pilot, who stood silent, waiting.

He relaxed and lay still for many moments, his huge chest rising and falling slowly, regularly. At last he rolled over on his stomach and pushed himself painfully, laboriously, to his feet.

In the next instant he had leaped at the pilot with the sudden, convulsive movement of a charging tiger. His heavy body crashed into the other, who was borne down by the sheer momentum of the attack. They milled around in the frelight, fighting like alley cats, first one on top, then the other, as they rolled over and over into the shadow of the trees.

The girls, spellbound, could see only the white blur of their faces, the flashing white of their hands, clearly to their ears through the snapping and crackling of the fire. Sobbing, rasping intakes of breath as their labored lungs gasped for air; coughing grunts as sledgehammer blows were driven home; the slithering scuffle of bodies against sand, brush and tree trunks; all these combined to make a hideous clamor that clutched the girls' hearts and beat against their brains. The two men rolled back into the ruddy frelight.

The Fight

Joan stifled a scream as she looked at them. In the few brief seconds of the struggle, they had almost lost semblance to human beings. Their clothes were torn to ribbons, their faces smeared with blood and dirt, their expressions those of men lusty to kill. White teeth glittered through blood-smeared lips that were contorted into hideous grimaces. She had never known that men could look so.

Something seemed to jerk her horrified gaze away from the two men on the ground. She found herself staring across the fire toward the gloom on the other side. She stood for an instant, as if hypnotized by what she saw, then abruptly turned away from her cousin's side and dashed zigzagging through the grove into the darkness, where she began to search the ground, casting back and forth like a setter trying to pick up a lost scent. She could hear the sounds of the fight behind her. Her own heart was beating in her ears, her breath hissing noisily through her clenched teeth.

Sally, by the fire, stared after her uncertainly. Then her fascinated eyes returned to the two men who were pounding each other, gouging one another with their hands and knees, lost to everything but the lusty desire to maim and kill.

Joan's efforts were frenzied now, as she ran this way and that, searching along the cleared spaces between the slender trees. Finally, with a gasp of triumph, she swooped down and clutched the cold steel barrel of the shotgun which Dave had whirled into the darkness. She raced back toward the fire. About to emerge into the flame-lit circle, she came to an abrupt stop and crouched beneath the fruit-laden boughs of a tree.

BLIND LAKE

Our heavy rains of last week damaged the roads in this locality to quite an extent. One bad washout was reported near the N. Anderson home, about 20 rods across being taken away. One east of the J. Dauber home was nearly as bad as the other. Mr. Brant and E. Peterson got stuck in the creek, and Fred Dauber pulled out the cars with a team of horses. Temporary bridges have been put in at both locations in order for travel to pass through.

E. Peterson, who has been employed at the home of his sister in Wisconsin this spring, arrived here Thursday for a few days. His niece and her two daughters accompanied him here for a visit of a week or two.

N. Anderson, F. McKeebe and E. Peterson were in town last Friday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. H. McKeebe visited at the F. McKeebe and J. Dauber homes on Sunday.

Mrs. N. Smith, superintendent of the Glen Lake sanatorium, her niece Margaret Hyland and Miss Mary Mitchell, one of the nurses, visited at the Nils Anderson home from Saturday evening until Sunday afternoon. Ellen Anderson left Monday morning to take up work at the Sanatorium for the summer.

The regular Sunday school session and a program were held Sunday morning at the school house. Twelve visitors were present to enjoy the meeting.

The Ed Johnson family visited with the E. Petersons on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. McKeebe and son called at the J. Dauber's Sunday afternoon.

Dinner guests at the J. Dauber home Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Dan Dauber, Mrs. H. McKeebe, Charles Hardy, and Russell and Frank Wickham.

Mrs. J. Smith, Mrs. Werrick and Miss Ruth Werrick visited at the Werrick home at Mule Lake Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Dan Dauber is visiting with her parents this week. Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Houggorde and family of Brainerd visited with her parents on Tuesday of this week.

Dave Ordway, wealthy, young aviator, makes a forced landing in an orange grove in the neighborhood of Florida. Looking for the owner to pay him for the damage, Dave comes upon two beautiful girls in overalls. Joan Marbury, with the aid of her cousin Sally, has been running the grove since her father's death. Hearing the wail of a plane, the owner of the adjoining grove, when he learns of the damage to his trees, the girls urge Dave to leave. He insists upon reimbursing Mueller, and when he learns Mueller has been molesting the girls, he is more anxious than ever to meet him. Just then Mueller's plane flies by. Dave wonders why he has an amphibian when there is no water in the vicinity. On the way to Mueller's, Dave pictures his former fiancée, haughty Barbara Holworthy, in Joan's place. When Dave objects to Mueller's demand for $2,000, Mueller takes $850 from Dave's wallet at the point of a gun, ordering a check for the balance. This Dave refuses and Mueller, threatening to collect, orders him out of the vicinity before nightfall. Knowing the girl's financial status, Dave is touched by her hospitality. He learns Joan is planning to sell the property and return north, though reluctant to leave the country. Sally, on the other hand, is anxious to get back to bright lights, crowds and music.

CHAPTER VI.

DAVE guessed that there was a long-standing difference of opinion between these girls. He had felt it ever since Sally had whispered an apology for Joan's apparent coyness. He had the feeling that it would not take a great deal to precipitate a break between them. But even as he studied their faces in an attempt to read what was in their minds, Hannah bustled into the room, almost incoherent in her excitement.

"Miss Joan," she panted, her eyes rolling wildly, "dey's someone out yonder do look like a awful big fire. Do look like Miss Mueller's house."

With one bound Dave was out of his chair and standing at the back window. The tops of the citrus trees were etched in a red and black half-tone against a background of leaping scarlet flames in the distance.

"That's just what it is—Mueller's house!" gasped Sally, her shoulder pressed against the flyer's side as she, too, crowded to the window.

The flames mounted higher and higher amid a cloud of viscous, fire-shot smoke which glowed dull red as it rolled off into the glowing sky. The very clouds themselves seemed to be ablaze as if the flames were feeding upon them.

A rumbling noise like distant heat thunder echoed through the tropic night. No wood-fed fire ever burned so fiercely.

More Than Money

"It's my plane!" exclaimed Dave, turning abruptly away from the window.

He raced down the long hall, leaped from the saging porch and ran through the grove, the girls following at their topmost speed.

What had once been a sleek little monoplane was now a gaunt skeleton of rapidly disintegrating struts and longerons, surrounded and encompassed by a veritable volcano of belching flames. Just as Dave came to an abrupt halt against the invisible barrier of searing heat, the radial motor dropped from its charred foundation and fell to the sandy soil, glowing cherry red. He shielded his face with his arms, locking his hands at the roaring fire. In a wide circle around the blaze the trees trembled restlessly in the rising air, their leaves shivering and turning brown as the heat blast entered the sap within their tender canals.

A dull ache throbbed in Dave's heart. The monetary loss meant little but the plane was as dear to him as is a blue-blooded horse to its master. It was more than an inanimate mechanism of wood, wire and metal. It had been a thing throbbing with life, hurtling breathlessly through the air as though it had been answering the pilot's very wishes instead of his hands on the stick and his feet on the rudder pedals.

Spatters of blazing gasoline were spewed out of the cauldron and set fire to patches of dead grass between the trees. Dozens of tiny fires burned fiercely for a moment and then smoldered to nothing. He watched them, dazedly, glad to take his eyes away from the funeral pyre of his Wasp.

Then, suddenly, he stiffened to attention, gazing intently at a tiny square object which was clearly outlined in the ruddy glare. He stepped forward, scooped it up and returned to the spot where the girls stood watching him.

"Know anyone who uses matches like these?" he asked, holding out a penny box of safeties.

"Almost everybody does," replied Joan. "You buy them in large packages at the cross-roads store."

Foul Play

Dave opened the box and scratched one of the matches against the abrasive. The little stick flared up in a bright yellow flame. He flicked it toward the burning plane.

"Is there much dew here at night?" he asked, a deep crease of thoughtfulness between his eyebrows.

"Yes. At this time of year," replied Joan, puzzled by his question, "the grass is quite wet in the morning."

"Could you have brought this box out here today?"

"No," Joan's voice was positive. "We only carry matches when we're burning scrub."

He slipped the box into his pocket and turned to watch the last remnants of his plane burn into charred sticks and glowing metal. The cousins, understanding his sense of personal loss, were silent in sympathy. There was little fuel to feed the flames, now.

In a few moments there would be nothing but smoldering debris.

"Let's go," Dave said quietly. But the girls did not move. They were staring fixedly into the darkness on the other side of the fire. Dave, curious, followed the line of their startled gaze. At first he could see nothing but the crimsoned fruit trees. Then, slowly emerging from the wavering shadows, came the figure of a man. A familiar, heavy-set figure, carrying a gun in the crook of his left arm. It was Mueller. Dave felt a pounding in his temples, a tightening in his throat.

By a conscious effort of will, he controlled his almost overpowering desire for battle and stood passive while Mueller stepped full into the flaming circle and stared curiously at the remnants of the plane.

The man's ratty eyes traveled over the fast-disappearing wreckage, then squinted through the glare to the other side, where the two girls and the pilot stood watching him. Slowly, deliberately, he spat toward the fire and stroled around to where the silent three were standing.

"Plane burned, eh?" he said, his face expressionless.

"Looks like it, doesn't it?" agreed Dave, fumbling in his pocket.

"A lot more of your trees gone, now," Mueller observed, staring at the girls. "They'll never live after being singed like that."

"It doesn't matter," said Joan, flatly.

Dave placed a cigarette between his lips and turned to Mueller.

"Have you a match?" he asked. Mueller glanced suspiciously at him and hesitated briefly. Then, seeing the girls' eyes upon him, he reached into his side pocket. He shook his head.

"Left 'em at home, I guess." Dave presented the box he had found in the grass.

"These yours?" he asked, quietly.

Mueller's shifty brown eyes clashed with his. A large, hairy hand accepted the box, opened it and offered it to the flyer.

"Yeah, guess they're mine, all right. Want one?"

Dave's hand shot forward, grasped the box of the shotgun and jerked it out of Mueller's arm.

He stepped back and, holding the weapon by the muzzle, whirled it around his head and hurled it far into the outer darkness of the grove. Then he faced the other, his mouth twitching slightly at the left corner.

"So you weren't content with your cheap little stick and had to burn my plane, eh?" Mueller's eyes were narrowed into agate-hard slits. He stood his ground.

"Didn't I tell you you'd save money writing me a check?" he retorted mockingly.

"Fair enough," snapped Dave. "That bus was worth $15,000. I'm going to take that amount out of your hide, right here and now."

Joan and Sally, shocked into immobility by the sudden flare-up of hostility, saw Dave's hand flash up as swiftly as the stroke of a rattlesnake and heard a dull chopping sound as his knuckles landed full on the point of Mueller's blue-black jaw. The man toppled as if he had been struck by lightning. He lay there, flat on his back, his hands fluttering oddly against the ground.

Then, slowly, he raised his head to look up at the pilot, who stood silent, waiting. He relaxed and lay still for many moments, his huge chest rising and falling slowly, regularly. At last he rolled over on his stomach and pushed himself painfully, laboriously, to his feet.

In the next instant he had leaped at the pilot with the sudden, convulsive movement of a charging tiger. His heavy body crashed into the other, who was borne down by the sheer momentum of the attack. They milled around in the firelight, fighting like alley cats, first one on top, then the other, as they rolled over and over into the shadow of the trees.

The girls, spellbound, could see only the white blur of their faces, the flashing white of their hands. The sound of the battle came clearly to their ears through the snapping and crackling of the fire. Sobbing, rasping intakes of breath as their labored lungs gasped for air; coughing grunts as sledgehammer blows were driven home; the slithering scuffle of bodies against sand, brush and tree trunks; all these combined to make a hideous clamor that clutched the girls' hearts and beat against their brains. The two men rolled back into the ruddy firelight.

The Fight

Joan stifled a scream as she looked at them. In the few brief seconds of the struggle, they had almost lost semblance to human beings. Their clothes were torn to ribbons, their faces smeared with blood and dirt, their expressions those of men lusty to kill. White teeth glittered through blood-smeared lips that were contorted into hideous grimaces. She had never known that men could look so.

Something seemed to jerk her horrified gaze away from the two men on the ground. She found herself staring across the fire toward the gloom on the other side. She stood for an instant, as if hypnotized by what she saw, then abruptly turned away from her cousin's side and dashed zigzagging through the grove into the darkness, where she began to search the ground, casting back and forth like a setter trying to pick up a lost scent. She could hear the sounds of the fight behind her. Her own heart was beating in her ears, her breath hissing noisily through her clenched teeth.

Sally, by the fire, stared after her uncertainly. Then her fascinated eyes returned to the two men who were pounding each other, gouging one another with their hands and knees, lost to everything but the lusty desire to maim and kill.

Joan's efforts were frenzied now, as she ran this way and that, searching along the cleared spaces between the slender trees. Finally, with a gasp of triumph, she swooped down and clutched at the cold steel barrel of the shotgun which Dave had whirled into the darkness. She reared back toward the fire. About to emerge into the flame-lit circle, she came to an abrupt stop and crouched beneath the fruit-laden boughs of a tree.

HOPE TO CLEAR STARR'S NAME OF INNUENDOES

STANLEY FAITHFULL KNOWS
NAME OF "MAN WHO KILLED
HER SOUL"

ALTHOUGH HE DOES NOT KNOW
NAME OF "MAN WHO KILLED
HER BODY"

Stanley Faithfull and his family have given the United Press the following story with the expressed intention of clearing Starr's name of innuendoes in part of the press.

By CARL D. GROAT
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1931, by United Press; reproduction without permission prohibited)

New York, June 19.—Stanley Faithfull, stepfather of the dead Starr Faithfull, told the United Press today he knew "the man who killed her soul" though he did not know the "man who killed her body."

Faithfull and his family suggested the recital of Starr's life might be of value to parents by causing them to guard their children against perils.

"We have thought seriously of what we say," Faithfull remarked after telling the story of how Starr had, after long concealment poured fourth a story of intimacies with a man old enough to be her father—a man whom she said had covered his deeds with the claim that he was acting in the role of father to her.

The mistreatment, as related by the girl, started at the age of 11 and had continued long, and in the meantime she was evidently struggling to reconcile in her own mind his deeds with the word she heard everywhere that the man in question could do no wrong.

This man had been trusted almost as a father, according to the Faithfulls, but had abused this confidence with shocking relations which, in Faithfull's words, "killed her soul" and left her at womanhood with a twisted view of life, love and sex.

It was in June, 1925, that Mrs. Faithfull, then living in West Orange, was advised that this man was coming to New York, and would take Starr to a theater. Subsequently, as the Faithfulls relate, he called up the West Orange home to suggest that it would be well if "Bamby"—as Starr was known—remained overnight in New York.

The girl was asked if she wished to remain in town.

"She talked incoherently and strangely, very much like a person who was under the influence of liquor, but I felt that it was inconceivable that she would have liquor being with —," Mrs. Faithfull continued. "She told me, 'I really think I had better.'"

When Starr returned home, she acted strangely, lay in her room, and acted "dazed but not hysterical, like a person under a drug."

Mrs. Faithfull at this point left, asking her husband to relate the rest of the story alone.

As given by him, Starr told of occurrences in the hotel. This happened only a few hours before time for the girl to sail on a cruise to England, and the family decided that it would be best not to have her abandon this trip. On this journey, Starr was reported to have taken considerable drink and to have become particularly excitable, whereas on previous trips she had drunk nothing.

Her condition seemed worse upon her return and the family had her consult an alienist.

Prior to this, she had unfolded to her mother a story of the relations of the man in the case. It came out in sections; sometimes only a few words; again in a flood as though by telling the details she was "purging her soul." The details are unprintable. The girl advised her mother that the man had acted under the guise of teaching her the things she should know and that her father would have given her. Her own father was separated from her mother.

The man's treatment of Starr left her with twisted mental reactions, while the autopsy indicated an impairment of internal organs, according to Faithfull, traceable to the early mistreatment.

She had men friends, the Faithfulls explain, but they were men of good family and respectability. Her interest in men, owing to her early experiences turned to the intellectual rather than physical attractions.

"The escapades reported in the press of a life in Greenwich Village could not have occurred as, owing to her depressed condition during a good portion of the period since her return from Europe last fall she had spent most of her time at home," Faithfull said.

"Not one evening had she been out except in the company of her mother during this entire time, with the exception of the last three days of her life."

"And during the daytime, we were able to account for her whereabouts, so the stories told of escapades must be a case of mistaken identity or the inventions of the sensational press."

Mrs. Faithfull and daughter, Tucker, went with her to London last June. "F. mby" had spells of happiness and depression. When she returned, she seemed to show improvement. When she returned last November she was depressed at the thought that she could not remain in England, but in time she became reconciled to the return and was very happy June 5, the day she left home—never to return alive.

RARE COFFEE WINS COUNTLESS NEW USERS BY FLAVOR

Amazing Popularity of Hills Bros. Coffee Tribute to Roasting Process

Years of experiment by Hills Bros. have resulted in the origination and perfection of the only Controlled Roasting process in use today.

By Hills Bros.' patented process, the degree of roast is positively controlled. The quantity of coffee passing into the roaster—about three pounds at a time—does not vary. The speed of the flow and the temperature remain the same, with the result that Hills Bros. Coffee is absolutely uniform. This roasting method is to a large degree responsible for the frequent question, "Why is Hills Bros. Coffee always the same?"

Comparisons show that Hills Bros. Coffee has a flavor no other coffee has. The ordinary method of roasting in bulk cannot insure a uniform roast because there is a lack of control.

The vacuum can, in which Hills Bros. Coffee is packed, keeps the coffee fresh. Air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is completely removed from the can and kept out. Coffee does not stay fresh in ordinary cans, even if air-tight. Ask for Hills Bros. Coffee by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can. Sold by grocers everywhere.

HOPE TO CLEAR STARR'S NAME OF INNUENDOES

STANLEY FAITHFULL KNOWS NAME OF "MAN WHO KILLED HER SOUL"

ALTHOUGH HE DOES NOT KNOW NAME OF "MAN WHO KILLED HER BODY"

Stanley Faithfull and his family have given the United Press the following story with the expressed intention of clearing Starr's name of innuendoes in part of the press.

By CARL D. GROAT
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1931, by United Press; reproduction without permission prohibited)

New York, June 19.—Stanley Faithfull, stepfather of the dead Starr Faithfull, told the United Press today he knew "the man who killed her soul" though he did not know the "man who killed her body."

Faithfull and his family suggested the recital of Starr's life might be of value to parents by causing them to guard their children against perils.

"We have thought seriously of what we say," Faithfull remarked after telling the story of how Starr had, after long concealment poured forth a story of intimacies with a man old enough to be her father—a man whom she said had covered his deeds with the claim that he was acting in the role of father to her.

The mistreatment, as related by the girl, started at the age of 11 and had continued long, and in the meantime she was evidently struggling to reconcile in her own mind his deeds with the word she heard everywhere that the man in question could do no wrong.

This man had been trusted almost as a father, according to the Faithfulls, but had abused this confidence with shocking relations which, in Faithfull's words, "killed her soul" and left her at womanhood with a twisted view of life, love and sex.

It was in June, 1926, that Mrs. Faithfull, then living in West Orange, was advised that this man was coming to New York, and would take Starr to a theater. Subsequently, as the Faithfulls relate, he called up the West Orange home to suggest that it would be well if "Bamby"—as Starr was known—remained overnight in New York.

The girl was asked if she wished to remain in town.

"She talked incoherently and strangely, very much like a person who was under the influence of liquor, but I felt that it was inconceivable that she would have liquor being with —," Mrs. Faithfull continued. "She told me, 'I really think I had better.' When Starr returned home, she acted strangely, lay in her room, and acted 'dazed but not hysterical, like a person under a drug.'"

Mrs. Faithfull at this point left, asking her husband to relate the rest of the story alone.

As given by him, Starr told of occurrences in the hotel. This happened only a few hours before time for the girl to sail on a cruise to England, and the family decided that it would be best not to have her abandon this trip. On this journey, Starr was reported to have taken considerable drink and to have become particularly excitable, whereas on previous trips she had drunk nothing.

Her condition seemed worse upon her return and the family had her consult an alienist.

Prior to this, she had unfolded to her mother a story of the relations of the man in the case. It came out in sections; sometimes only a few words; again in a flood as though by telling the details she was "purging her soul." The details are unprintable. The girl advised her mother that the man had acted under the guise of teaching her the things she should know and that her father would have given her. Her own father was separated from her mother.

The man's treatment of Starr left her with twisted mental reactions, while the autopsy indicated an impairment of internal organs, according to Faithfull, traceable to the early mistreatment.

She had men friends, the Faithfulls explain, but they were men of good family and respectability. Her interest in men, owing to her early experiences turned to the intellectual rather than physical attractions.

"The escapades reported in the press of a life in Greenwich Village could not have occurred as, owing to her depressed condition during a good portion of the period since her return from Europe last fall she had spent most of her time at home," Faithfull said.

"Not one evening had she been out except in the company of her mother during this entire time, with the exception of the last three days of her life.

"And during the daytime, we were able to account for her whereabouts, so the stories told of escapades must be a case of mistaken identity or the inventions of the sensational press."

Mrs. Faithfull and daughter, Tucker, went with her to London last June. "F. mby" had spells of happiness and depression. When she returned, she seemed to show improvement. When she returned last November she was depressed at the thought that she could not remain in England, but in

Amazing Popularity of Hills Bros. Coffee Tribute to Roasting Process

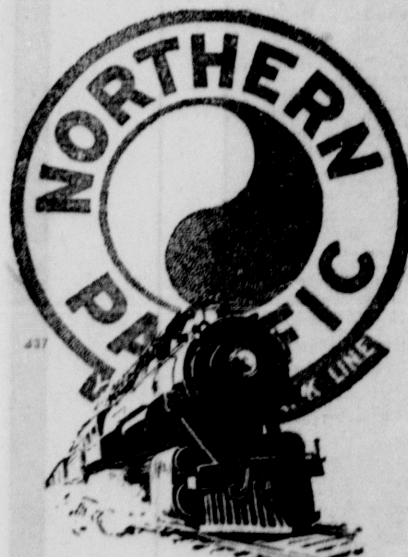

Years of experiment by Hills Bros. have resulted in the origination and perfection of the only Controlled Roasting process in use today.

By Hills Bros.' patented process, the degree of roast is positively controlled. The quantity of coffee passing into the roaster—about three pounds at a time—does not vary. The speed of the flow and the temperature remain the same, with the result that Hills Bros. Coffee is absolutely uniform. This roasting method is to a large degree responsible for the frequent question, "Why is Hills Bros. Coffee always the same?"

Comparisons show that Hills Bros. Coffee has a flavor no other coffee has. The ordinary method of roasting in bulk cannot insure a uniform roast because there is a lack of control.

The vacuum can, in which Hills Bros. Coffee is packed, keeps the coffee fresh. Air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is completely removed from the can and kept out. Coffee does not stay fresh in ordinary cans, even if air-tight. Ask for Hills Bros. Coffee by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can. Sold by grocers everywhere.

ATHLETICS, SENATORS IN TIGHT RACE FOR LEAGUE PENNANT

PACE SETTING LEADERS HAVE TWO AND HALF GAME LEAD

ATHLETICS OPEN SECOND WESTERN INVASION AGAINST CHICAGO

SENATORS TAKE ON CLEVELAND INDIANS, HAVE HARD SCHEDULE

By LEO H. PETERSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, June 19.—Philadelphia and Washington renewed their battle for the American League leadership in the west today.

The pace-setting Athletics, holding a two and one half game advantage over Washington, opened their second western invasion against Chicago while the Senators took on the Cleveland Indians. Washington faces the hardest schedule for the club must play 17 games in 14 days against the four western teams while the Athletics have one less contest for the same period.

Both Washington and Philadelphia have had astonishing success against the four western clubs. From the White Sox, Indians, Tigers and Browns the Senators have won 24 of 27 contests while from the same teams the Athletics have taken 23 games while dropping three. Unless the western clubs can stop them on the current invasion, the Athletics and Senators will make the American League race such a runaway affair that nothing short of a miracle could keep them from finishing one-two.

The western teams of the National League began their second invasion of the east yesterday.

The St. Louis Cardinals retained their three-game margin over New York by coming from behind to nose out Boston, 5 to 4. Ed Brandt, star Boston southpaw, held the Cardinals scoreless for six innings while his mates piled up a three-run lead off Johnson.

The Cardinals tied it off Brandt in the seventh before he retired, however, and added another marker in the same frame off Haid. Chick Hafe's home run accounted for the final St. Louis tally while the Braves threatened in the ninth and had the tying and winning runs on bases when Stout, who had relieved Johnson after the latter was removed for a pinch hitter, retired the side.

The second place Giants kept pace by turning back Pittsburgh, 3 to 1 behind the hurling of Carl Hubbell. Hubbell allowed only six hits and the Pirates run was due to errors by Jackson and Terry in the first inning. New York got nine hits off Larry French.

Brooklyn and Chicago split a double header, the Robins winning the opener 7 to 5 and the Cubs the aftermath, 8 to 0. Dazzy Vance was hit hard in the first contest but was effective in the pinches, striking out eleven Cub batters. In the second game Pat Malone allowed the Robins only five scattered hits, three of which went to Herman.

Four successive walks enabled Philadelphia to defeat Cincinnati, 5 to 4. The Phillies went into the ninth inning with the score tied but after one man was retired the next four batters were issued bases on balls to force in the winning run.

AL SINGER WINS COMEBACK FIGHT OVER MASSEY

The Fallen Mastodon

Still down and very much out was Pat Redmond, huge Irish fighter, when this picture was snapped a moment after Primo Carnera, Italian giant, landed flush on his opponent's lantern jaw just two minutes and twenty-four seconds after their bout began at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn. Thirty thousand jammed the field to see the two mastodons go through their ponderous rites, but their show turned out to be short and anything but sweet for Pat. Primo is shown standing over his crumpled-up victim.

LOUISVILLE AGAIN ALTERNATES LEAGUE LEAD WITH ST. PAUL
(By United Press)

Only two games separated the first four teams in the American Association pennant race today as Louisville again alternated the league lead with St. Paul.

Louisville regained the first place position by defeating Kansas City 5 to 4 in eleven innings. Ken Penner allowed Kansas City only one run after the third inning. Ed Holley was taken out in the ninth by Kansas City for a pinch hitter.

Before President Thomas J. Hickey and other Association officials, Sergeant George Connolly, Toledo ace, pitched his way out of trouble several times to defeat St. Paul 8 to 7. St. Paul outthit Toledo, but Connolly kept the hits scattered.

The fast travelling Minneapolis team took an extra inning game from Columbus, 8 to 5, after 11 innings. A streak of wildness by Ed Chapman, Columbus pitcher, allowed Minneapolis to fill the bases in the eleventh and score three runs. Dutch Henry, Minneapolis relief pitcher, retired Columbus in the last half of the inning without damage.

Montague and Harlesky, Indianapolis shortstop and third baseman, hit home runs in a 6 to 3 victory over Milwaukee as Marty Griffen, Indian pitcher, held Milwaukee scoreless in seven of the nine innings.

Passenger Traffic is Opened on Great Lakes

Duluth, Minn., June 19.—(UP)—Docking of the steamer Hermonie from Detroit today opened passenger traffic on the Great Lakes between the Head of the Lakes and Buffalo, N. Y.

The steamer will leave tonight on the five day return trip. Half a dozen steamers of two shipping lines will make trips to Canadian and eastern cities during the summer season.

Steamship schedules call for operation of passenger steamers until September 12.

PROSPECTS FOR TITLE RECAPTURE EXTREMELY REMOTE

SHOWING AGAINST MASSEY WAS NOT VERY CONVINCING ONE

WOULD HAVE LOST HAD BOUT EXTENDED 2 OR 5 ROUNDS MORE

New York, June 19.—(UP)—Al Singer, 21-year-old former world's light-weight champion, had a victory over Lew Massey of Philadelphia to his credit today as the first step in his "comeback" campaign, but his prospects of regaining the title which he lost to Tony Canzoneri last November appeared extremely remote.

On the basis of his showing against Massey, Singer is entitled to rating no better than the seventh place accorded him in the National Boxing Association rankings. Certainly he showed nothing to stamp him as a worthy foe for Champion Canzoneri, Jack (Kid) Berg, Justo Suarez or Billy Petrolle.

Al had every physical advantage over the little Philadelphia battler, outweighing him 134½ to 132 1-4 and having a decided edge in height, speed and reach. Despite these advantages he did little more than gain the decision and Massey was coming fast at the finish. If the bout had gone another two or five rounds it seemed certain that Singer would lose out.

Chicago, June 19.—Earl Mastro, 125 3-4, defeated Midget Mike O'Dowd, 127 3-4, Columbus, O., in 10 rounds at Mills Stadium last night. O'Dowd was down for a count of nine in the third round and for a count of eight in the ninth round.

Hollywood, June 19.—Young Corbett, 148, Fresno, outpointed Meyer Grace, 147, Philadelphia, in ten rounds; and Johnny Previs, 135, Los Angeles, felled Don Smith in the second.

HAGEN COMES OUT OF EXILE

VETERAN DETROIT GOLFER IS LEADING IN 1931 WESTERN OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP

Dayton, O., June 19.—(UP)—Out of exile came Walter Hagen, and today at the start of the second 18-hole flight the veteran Detroit golfer was leading in the 1931 Western Open championship with a record breaking 63 for the opening round.

As the field of champions teed off for the second round over the Miami Valley Country Club course, Hagen was one stroke up on Ed Dudley, the tall driver from Concordville, Pa. The returned hero of a thousand link battles held three strokes over Gene Sarazen, pre-tournament favorite, whose par 71 placed him in a tie for fourth place.

One stroke behind the Pennsylvanian were Olin Dutra of Santa Monica, Cal., and Charley Garinger, Indianapolis outsider, deadlocked for third place. Gene Marchi, Dayton, and Lou Waldron, of Celia, O., were tied with Sarazen at par.

Hagen established his lead before a huge gallery eager to witness a comeback. His card shows nine threes for the eighteen holes. He sank two 20-foot putts, both of them for eagle threes. The veteran was out in 36 and back with a 32, four under par.

The Broad Highway

Not so many years ago a shopping expedition was a task calling for the expenditure of a great deal of time and energy. Roads were poor, particularly in the country. And, after having toiled to the market places, the shopper had to use unusual discrimination to be sure of getting the things that best suited the family's needs.

All that is changed. Paved roads in city and country make transportation swift, safe and easy. And advertising is like one of those highways, leading straight to the mark, permitting speedy, economical buying. Giving information. Enabling choices to be made at home. Reducing shopping to the easy selection of brands of known quality. Eliminating buying puzzlement and doubts. Saving you minutes and hours for other things—amusements, reading, culture, family duties. Reducing wear and tear on mind and body and money.

It pays to travel this new, modern road . . . this broad highway paved with printers' ink. Read the advertisements.

Advertising is the highway to better buying

You see the Governor has taken a violent dislike to anyone who would be so crude as to stroke the jewsharp toward the cheek instead of away from it, and he's found a worthy exponent of his beliefs in smiling Frank above. AL SINGER WINS COMEBACK FIGHT OVER MASSEY

The Fallen Mastodon

Still down and very much out was Pat Redmond, huge Irish fighter, when this picture was snapped a moment after Primo Carnera, Italian giant, landed flush on his opponent's lantern jaw just two minutes and twenty-four seconds after their bout began at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn. Thirty thousand jammed the field to see the two mastodons go through their ponderous rites, but their show turned out to be short and anything but sweet for Pat. Primo is shown standing over his crumpled-up victim.

LOUISVILLE AGAIN ALTERNATES LEAGUE LEAD WITH ST. PAUL
(By United Press)

Only two games separated the first four teams in the American Association pennant race today as Louisville again alternated the league lead with St. Paul.

Louisville regained the first place position by defeating Kansas City 5 to 4 in eleven innings. Ken Penner allowed Kansas City only one run after the third inning. Ed Holley was taken out in the ninth by Kansas City for a pinch hitter.

Before President Thomas J. Hickey and other Association officials, Sergeant George Connolly, Toledo ace, pitched his way out of trouble several times to defeat St. Paul 8 to 7. St. Paul outlived Toledo, but Connolly kept the hits scattered.

The fast travelling Minneapolis team took an extra inning game from Columbus, 8 to 5, after 11 innings. A streak of wildness by Ed Chapman, Columbus pitcher, allowed Minneapolis to fill the bases in the eleventh and score three runs. Dutch Henry, Minneapolis relief pitcher, retired Columbus in the last half of the inning without damage.

Montague and Harlesky, Indianapolis shortstop and third baseman, hit home runs in a 6 to 3 victory over Milwaukee as Marty Griffen, Indian pitcher, held Milwaukee scoreless in seven of the nine innings.

Today's games:
Kansas City at Louisville.
St. Paul at Toledo.
Milwaukee at Indianapolis.
Minneapolis at Columbus.

Passenger Traffic is Opened on Great Lakes

Duluth, Minn., June 19.—(U.P.)—Docking of the steamer Hermonia from Detroit today opened passenger traffic on the Great Lakes between the Head of the Lakes and Buffalo, N. Y.

The steamer will leave tonight on the five day return trip. Half a dozen steamers of two shipping lines will make trips to Canadian and eastern cities during the summer season.

Steamship schedules call for operation of passenger steamers until September 12.

PROSPECTS FOR TITLE RECAPTURE EXTREMELY REMOTE

SHOWING AGAINST MASSEY WAS NOT VERY CONVINCING ONE

WOULD HAVE LOST HAD BOUT EXTENDED 2 OR 5 ROUNDS MORE

New York, June 19.—(U.P.)—Al Singer, 21-year-old former world's light-weight champion, had a victory over Lew Massey of Philadelphia to his credit today as the first step in his "comeback" campaign, but his prospects of regaining the title which he lost to Tony Canzoneri last November appeared extremely remote.

On the basis of his showing against Massey, Singer is entitled to rating no better than the seventh place accorded him in the National Boxing Association rankings. Certainly he showed nothing to stamp him as a worthy foe for Champion Canzoneri, Jack (Kid) Berg, Justo Suarez or Billy Petrolle.

Al had every physical advantage over the little Philadelphia battler, outweighing him 134½ to 132 1-4 and having a decided edge in height, speed and reach. Despite these advantages he did little more than gain the decision and Massey was coming fast at the finish. If the bout had gone another two or five rounds it seemed certain that Singer would lose out.

Chicago, June 19.—Earl Mastro, 125 3-4, defeated Midget Mike O'Dowd, 127 3-4, Columbus, O., in 10 rounds at Mills Stadium last night. O'Dowd was down for a count of nine in the third round and for a count of eight in the ninth round.

Pep Justo, 153, Madison, Wis., outpointed Joe Sharkey, 150½, Albion, Mich., 8 rounds.

Hollywood, June 19.—Young Corbett, 148, Fresno, outpointed Meyer Grace, 147, Philadelphia, in ten rounds; and Johnny Previs, 135, Los Angeles, felled Don Smith in the second.

JOHNNY GOODMAN LEADS OPPONENT

IS NINE UP ON FRED DOLD, OF WICHITA, AT END OF THE 21ST HOLE

By HILLIER KRIEGHEAUM
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Minneapolis, Minn., June 16.—(U.P.)—Johnny Godoman, Omaha, was seven up on Fred Dold, Wichita, at the end of the morning round of today's semi-final round of the Trans-Mississippi golf tourney.

The Omaha star, who held the title in 1927, took the first three holes, two of them with birdies. Dold was able only to win the fifth and to halve the fourth and ninth of the first nine.

Lester Bolstad, St. Paul, and Dr. Paul Barton, Davenport, were playing erratic golf. They were even at the turn of the morning round. Bolstad took the second and fourth while Barton had the fifth and ninth. Bolstad missed a short putt on the ninth to miss halving the hole.

Bolstad, however, was able to go two up by the end of the morning 18 holes.

Goodman continued to gain during the afternoon round and at the end of the 21st hole was nine up on Dold. Bolstad maintained his margin and was 2 up on Dr. Barton at the end of the 20th hole.

HAGEN COMES OUT OF EXILE

VETERAN DETROIT GOLFER IS LEADING IN 1931 WESTERN OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP

Dayton, O., June 19.—(U.P.)—Out of exile came Walter Hagen, and today at the start of the second 18-hole flight the veteran Detroit golfer was leading in the 1931 Western Open championship with a record breaking 63 for the opening round.

As the field of champions teed off for the second round over the Miami Valley Country Club course, Hagen was one stroke up on Ed Dudley, the tall driver from Concordville, Pa. The returned hero of a thousand link battles held three strokes over Gene Sarazen, pre-tournament favorite, whose par 71 placed him in a tie for fourth place.

One stroke behind the Pennsylvanian were Olin Dutra of Santa Monica, Cal., and Charley Garinger, Indianapolis outsider, deadlocked for third place. Gene Marchi, Dayton, and Lou Waldron, of Celnia, O., were tied with Sarazen at par.

Hagen established his lead before a huge gallery eager to witness a comeback. His card shows nine threes for the eighteen holes. He sank two 20-foot putts, both of them for eagle threes. The veteran was out in 36 and back with a 32, four under par.

The Broad Highway

Not so many years ago a shopping expedition was a task calling for the expenditure of a great deal of time and energy. Roads were poor, particularly in the country. And, after having toiled to the market places, the shopper had to use unusual discrimination to be sure of getting the things that best suited the family's needs.

All that is changed. Paved roads in city and country make transportation swift, safe and easy. And advertising is like one of those highways, leading straight to the mark, permitting speedy, economical buying. Giving information. Enabling choices to be made at home. Reducing shopping to the easy selection of brands of known quality. Eliminating buying puzzlement and doubts. Saving you minutes and hours for other things—amusements, reading, culture, family duties. Reducing wear and tear on mind and body and money.

It pays to travel this new, modern road . . . this broad highway paved with printers' ink. Read the advertisements.

Advertising is the highway to better buying

Backs Governor on Jewsharp

RIGHT WRONG
Governor Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, is a happy man again, and with cause, for hasn't Frank Luther, popular radio tenor come to the rescue of the Executive with a declaration that there's only one way one to play a Jewsharp correctly and that's "forwards"? You see the Governor has taken a violent dislike to anyone who would be so crude as to stroke the Jewsharp toward the cheek instead of away from it, and he's found a worthy exponent of his beliefs in smiling Frank above. The right and wrong ways of Jewsharpping also are illustrated.

HAIL CRASHES 14 WINDOWS OF HOME

Peter Dryer, Farmer, Said Hail Two Inches in Diameter, Hit With Fury at House

CUTS FREAKISH PATH

Light Rainfall in Some Sections; Greens on Country Club Course Damaged

Rain, wind and hail cut a freakish path through Crow Wing county last night shortly before midnight doing considerable damage in tearing down trees, breaking of windows and cutting lawns.

Peter Dryer, farmer, living three miles from Brainerd on the Merrifield road gave a descriptive account of the fury of the storm.

"I was sitting in my house when the storm hit. Suddenly the hail crashed through the windows. Glass and hail swept in on me," he said.

The farmer estimated that the hail stones were two inches in diameter. He said that 14 windows in his home were broken and that he could have scooped up shovelfull of the hail from the ground.

Cutting into the grass greens at the Brainerd Country club course, workmen were doing what they could today to repair the hail damage.

Trees in Brainerd were blown down, particularly in Southeast Brainerd. The Bredenberg home had a tree fall over the porch.

The storm cut a swath from the northwest and avoided many of the lakes in the Gull Lake area where a little fall of rain was reported.

Just previous to the storm sharp heat lightning hit. The rain helped to cool off the evening and provided more comfortable sleep for city dwellers after one of the warmest days of the summer, the temperature in the city reaching 90 in the daytime and 89 degrees in the evening.

Electric light and telephone poles in the district rode the storm well.

George Graff in Local Hospital With Slashed Wrists and Effects of Poison

FOUND AFTER 24 HOURS

Elderly Man Reported to Have Used Razor in Attempting Life at Mission Lake

An elderly Northeast Brainerd man who attempted his life by taking two teaspoonsful of Paris Green and slashing the veins in both wrists with a razor at Mission Lake was reported improving at the St. Joseph's hospital today.

George Graff, 65 years old, had been taking care of and living in one of a number of cottages on Mission Lake. Two days ago he became despondent and took the means described to end his life, it was reported here.

In slashing his wrists he missed the main arteries. The blood spurted from his wrists and feeling no immediate sign of death he stayed around his cottage. He became weak and went to bed. Wednesday night the flow of blood stopped momentarily. The Paris Green made him intensely sick. Last evening neighbors visited him and found him in the cottage, the floor covered with blood, the man holding his wrists. His wounds had reopened. They rushed him to the Brainerd hospital where stitches were put in to stop the flow of blood. He is expected to recover.

Judge so Rules in Will Contest Case Brought for More Even Division of Property

Favoritism to one son in the family was the basis of an action brought in district court and tried Thursday before Judge B. F. Wright contesting the will of Ole C. Olson, deceased Nokay Lake township farmer.

Judge Wright after hearing the documentary evidence ruled the will to be valid.

Children of the family brought the case in an endeavor to establish a more even division of the property. The grounds were undue influence and lack of testamentary capacity.

Olsen left a homestead, other real estate and a considerable amount of personal property.

RULED IN DRUNK CASE

Lars Rodman Arrested When He Refused to Pay Taxicab Fare on Arriving Home

Judge J. H. Warner today made it plain that henceforth the city of Brainerd will not wait for fines.

"Pay up or go to jail and serve the sentence," was the edict of the judge this morning when a prisoner guilty of drunkenness wanted time to pay his $10 dollar fine.

In the past, it has been the custom that where a prisoner shows a willingness to pay his fine and can do so in a few days, the court has granted such a privilege. Some have violated their promises.

"The court will not wait any longer in collecting fines. They must be paid immediately," the judge said.

The prisoner to whom such a ruling was pronounced was Lars Rodman.

Telling of the circumstances of which Rodman was arrested, Chief Thomas Templeton said police were called to a home in Southeast Brainerd last evening on the complaint of a disturbance. Rodman was in the house and rather than arrest him in

Announcing The Opening of Our Karmelkorn Shop at SCHMITY'S Saturday, June 20th

Something New and Different

This delicious confection is made from imported pop corn being raised in South America. A candy made of sugar and honey is blended with this pop corn giving it a distinctly different flavor. A confection enjoyed by both young and old—once tasted never forgotten. A box of this confection is a wonderful treat to friends and relatives living away from here. Also our buttered pop corn is made from the same luscious kernels, thereby holding its sweet flavor. You will never get old Karmelkorn or pop corn as we are making it fresh every hour. Come in and try either, or better both. We are sure that we will win your friendship and patronage.

"The Flavor That Can't Be Copied"
